Wanted--- .....A Boy

PERHAPS you have heard about this boy, already for Mr. Winchester is a business man now, and is very fond indeed of telling this story. But if you have not heard it, I'll tell you as nearly as I can in the way he gave it to us, one evening at dinner, when the conversation had turned on "making one's way in life."

Old Mr. Adams—for so he is called to distinguish him from young Adams, his son, who was in partnership with him—owned a large hardware establishment in a prosperous Massachusetts town. He was rich and growing steadily richer; for he was as keen and capable as he was kind and honest; moreover, he had the reputation of being the best of employers toward those in his service. So that when day after day that sign, "Wanted—a Boy," appeared so regularly in the Adams' window, everybody wondered why the boy wasn't found.

It certainly wasn't for lack of boys. There was a steady stream of them passing through the doorway, day after day. Sometimss they left in less than ten minutes; sometimes they stayed all day. But as regularly as the sun rose and shone on that square little sign, the inquiring "Boy" came and went,

"He wants a full fledged angel, with a dozen pairs of wings; that's what the old Adam wants," snapped one disappointed fellow, who had been airing his grievances with a little knot of other youngsters on the sidewalk in front.

Whatever he wanted, he seemed to be having a hard time in getting it; but Mr. Adams has the reputation of always knowing what he was about, so no one interfered, tho several were tempted to ask the why and the wherefore of this freak.

The boys were shown one by one into his office: and one by one were told what it was that Mr. Adams wanted. That was, a trusty, faithful capable sub-clerk. Of course each youngster was delighted to find out that it was not merely a boy to run errands, but a genuine assistant clerk that was being sought for. Why the owner of the establishment should be willing to take a boy instead of one of the many grown men, who would have been glad of such a place, they could not understand. But they could understand that it was a splendid place for a young fellow just beginning life and all were eager to obtain it.

Andrew Mathers stayed just one day; Frank Scolley one hour; Matt Wyman twenty minutes, and some of the boys who applied never got further than the office door and a three minutes' interview.

What could the matter be? Suppose we see.

Andrew was a bright, pleasant-faced young fellow, and came from a good family. The boys thought that if any one stood a chance, that would be Andrew.

"Good-morning, sir," said Mr. Adams, politly, as Andrew entered the office. And the boy answered with his best bow and with his most courteously businesslike manner. So far so good.

Mr. Adams briefly explained the long-felt want, "a boy to be a sort of assistant clerk." Andrew held his head a little higher, as if he already saw himself a real live clerk instead of drudging boy of all work that he had been before. "And to help around generally, for odds and ends." The young fellow's face fell. That sounded rather too much like an errands boy's work. But he brightened up and asked where he should begin. For an hour or two he was busy helping the clerks. By and by Mr. Adams came into the back part of the store where his new sub-clerk was engaged in marking a keg.

"Almost through there, Mathers?" he asked. "Well I wish you'd tackle the back storeroom. It's in such confusion, and we've all been so busy to see to it properly."

"You want it put in order?" asked Andrew, doubtfully. He foresaw more sweeping, etc., than seemed dignified for a sub-clerk.

"Yes, it needs it decidedly;" and the merchant passed on. He wondered how Andrew would hold out; he was "the best of the lot, so far," he thought regretfully. For the trial was coming and by the boy's face he looked rather dubious.

Andrew explored the old back room, and decided on what he considered a most brilliant scheme. Calling the errand boy aside, he told him about the storeroom, and showed him a bright half dollar. Jim was tempted, and accepted the offer, promising to have the place ready that afternoon at the earliest hour possible. But there were so many errands to be done, that by three o'clock Jim had found not a minute's leisure, and Mr. Adams, as ill luck would have it, happened to go to the storeroom for something he wanted about that time, and discovered the still forelorn condition of matters, and the fact that Andrew had secretly hired Jim to do his work, while he loafed in the front of the store, anxious to show off the fact of his rise in the business world.

And that night Andrew Mathers received a day's wages, and politely regretful dismissal—reason unassigned.

Matt was so careless in his dress, and his hands were so evidently at home with the dust of the earth, that, with a short lecture on cleanliness, he was summarily dismissed.

Joe McCarthy was too rough. The clerks complained of his insolence within half an hour. And Tim McCarthy, his cousin, proved an inveterate liar.

So they came and went, good (in spots), bad and indifferent.

It was almost two weeks after the sign had first gone up that Charley Winchester applied to the office.

In all that time no boy had seemed to suit. Evidently the need was not a pressing one; there were plenty of clerks, seemingly, and a fairly good errand boy. The Adam's store seemed able to exist without that peculiar kind of a boy, and yet its owners were still on the warpath, apparently searching for some as yet unheard of specimen of boyhood.

Charley had thought of applying at first. He was attening school, and working hard and steadily every moment outside of school hours; for the Winchesters were poor, altho they had once known better days. That poverty is the hardest of all to bear, as Charley well knew; and it was his hope and his aim to bring about brighter times as soon as he could.

He was anxious to be in school; for he realized that his education would fit him to fill a higher position than he could find without it. But after a talk with the principal, with the minister, and a leader of a night school, he found that he could advance as rapidly by attending the evening classes, with the addition of two studies in which the principal could still allow him to continue, as tho he were to remain in the High School. And he had learned from the other boys that the sub-clerk was to have two hours a day free for school work; for Mr. Adams knew very well what was the value of an education.

About ten o'clock on Charley's first morning, Mr. Adams, Sr., came down the store to the counter, where his young sub-clerk was doing up a little bag of nails for Johnny Smith.

Charley smiled pleasantly at the little fellow and he evidently was as courteous to such customers as to their dignfied elders.

"Oh, by the way, Winchester," said Mr. Adams, "I wish you'd tackle the old back store room, the ell to the large store room we use now. The old one has been waiting some time for a good cleaning out. You can begin when you see a chance, some time." That was leaving Charlie quite a margin; and Author or Tom, his predecessors, would surely have put it off until a more convenient season—till to-morrow, at any rate.

But Charlie soon found out from the clerks that he was not needed in the store, and would not be, probably, for the rest of the morning, and he went at once on his fatal expedition. He discovered the same chaos which had conquered the explorers before him, but he set resolutely to work. He could not help wondering at, and rather criticising, the carelessness of his employer, tho he tried to excuse him as far as he could.

"I suppose he has so much to attend to," he said to himself—there was no one else, unless you counted the rats, who now and then scampered out from their hiding places to see who their invador was, to whom he could talk. "But if I were the proprietor, I'd see that my clerks or somebody, kept things in order, if I didn't do it myself."

Nevertheless, Charley determined that order must be restored, even at this late day; and how he did work! All the rest of the morning he rolled and piled the barrels and boxes, until he had the "center of the deck cleared for action," as he put it. Then what do you think he tried next? Something that boys don't especially enjoy. And how Mr. Adams eyes danced, when he looked in about noon, to see young Winchester down on his knees scrubbing with all his might!

Charley straightened himself with as dignified an air as possible under such circumstances (his sleeves were rolled up, and he was wearing as an apron a large dusting cloth which happened to be the only clean thing Anderson, one of the clerks, could find for him). He flushed a little, but tried to make his greeting very quietly courteous and indifferent.

"It is rather damp here for you, I fear, Mr. Adams. You will find that place rather soapy. I'm just letting the soap sink in on that spot as the only way to take it out. Towards the left you will find it drier, I think."

There was a little defiant ring in the boyish voice, but Mr. Adams could easily pardon that. He knew that boys do not especially enjoy being caught in such attire, or doing "girl's work," as some rather foolish fellows choose to designate it.

He noticed that the windows were washed and polished. "And dust and cobwebs have reveled there ever since I thought of this scheme!" thought the owner.

"I couldn't see plain till they were clearer," said Charley, calmly scouring away at a spot where lampblack must have been reposing for years, so indelibly did it seem imprinted there.

"I won't get it done to-day, sir; but you said there was no hurry," Charley went on devoutly hoping that the proprietor would betake himself elsewhere very speedily; for it is embarrassing to have a man stand by and watch you mop, especially if you can't find any mop handler and are obliged to kneel more or less gracefully to the work.

"Oh no, no hurry; not in the least," Mr. Adams hastened to assure him.

"And the air was close and dusty. It will be fresh, and easier to breathe here by tomorrow," the new sub-clerk continued, decisively. The decision in his tone was due to the energy with which he was scouring that black spot.

"If I do it at all I'm going to do it up fine," the young fellow had determined. "And I don't care if the other fellows do think it's woman's work. I don't know why it should be. I consider it harder than waiting on customers; why, my back's most lame now. I don't how women can do it. I've often done it for Mother, only our floors were not so utterly awful as this old storeroom. And it's honest work, and I won't be ashamed of it; so!"

Mr. Adams must have read young Winchester's thoughts. For he was softly chuckling to himself as he went back to the store. "He'll do! he'll do! he thinks it a girl's work, but he won't be ashamed of it; and he is as thorough as can be!"

The next day it was rainy, and there was not much to do in the store, so Charley had a long busy day in the shed room. And by night the task was done. Everything was cleaned-sorted, and neatly arranged, and what seemed utterly worthless laid aside in a heap just outside the door, where Mr. Adams could glance at it, and see if anything in it proved fit to save.

And young Winchester was retained. This sign did not appear again, for that particular, especial wonderful, superhuman kind of a "Boy" that was "Wanted" had certainly been found.

Mr. Adams invited all the applicants in to store one day. The office could not hold them, and he gave them a pleasant but very frank "talk" indeed; and he explained the shed-room scheme, the rock on which so many had struck; and he gave them some good advice for future service, too. He was interested in boyhood, and he was a thorough business man. Many of the listeners carried its help with them through life; but some of the boys were angry.

"I should say it was a scheme," declared one, angrily, as they talked it over on the grocer's boxes and other loafing places that night.

"I should have thought we'd have caught on to it," complained another.

"Well, he didn't try it on them all, you see. Found out all he wanted to without it. And then he had such an offhand way we never though of that old shed's being a test," concluded a third.

And did Charley marry the proprietor's daughter and live in luxury thereafter?

Well, yes and no. He didn't marry the daughter—Mr. Adams's family consisted of himself, his son and the housekeeper. So in that respect I confess that young Winchester was not exactly the regular hero of a story book. But he did become a partner before many years. That was what Mr. Adams was planning for—a boy to grow up in the business, and to be with his son when he himself was too old for active partnership.

I heard Winchester tell the story last week. He is a rising, popular business man of the Adams & Winchester Hardware firm. And he is as thorough and energetic to-day as when, years ago, he scrubbed out the old shed room, which he owns now. And he wants a sub-clerk himself. I wonder where he'll find another like himself. Who do you suppose will answer his "Wanted a Boy"? It's a long felt want and likely to be long felt. There are plenty of boys in general, but where is that particular, special kind of a boy?

A Stubborn Woman.

We read that when Jove had the ordering of mundane affairs, he promised to send rain on any day that would be agreed upon by the whole world. It was reported at last that they were all ready for rain at a certain date, except one old woman who wanted to make soap on that particular day. Women are often accused of being capricious and whimsical; but there is one point on which they will all agree—the destrability of being well, and looking well. Every woman, be she young or old, always wants to look her best; and in order to do this, it is necessary to attain that state of health which will impart a sparkle to her eye, a bloom to her cheek, and grace and symmetry to her entire form. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a panacea for all chronic "weaknesses" and derangements of functions peculiar to the sex, and is beyond all comparison the great healer of women.

Washington .....Letter

OLD Man Mystery is Mr. Cleveland's latest Washington name. It has been bestowed upon him on account of his growing liking for mystifying the public as to his comings and goings. His manner of returning to Washington after his long absence emphasizes the correctness of the new appellation. None of his friends have ever succeeded in giving a satisfactory explanation of this desire to keep his movements secret, especially when going upon or returning from a trip, although some of them have made ingenious attempts in that line. There is some curiosity expressed as to whether when he takes his cabinet down to Atlanta he will try to smuggle himself and them out of the city. If anybody knows when the party is to start they are keeping the knowledge to themselves. All that is known in Washington is that arrangements are being made in Atlanta to have the the Presidential party at the Exposition on the 22d inst.

While no Senator has made a positive statement to that effect, enough has been said by senators to make it wellnigh certain that there will be no general reorganization of the Senate when Congress meets, owing to neither party having a clear majority in that body and to neither Republicans or Democrats desiring to allow the Populists to dictate the organization by making a deal for their votes. By this it is not meant that there will be no changes among the officials and committee chairmen of the Senate, for there is likely to be a number, but they will be only such as shall be agreed upon by both Republican and Democratic senators, and will be of the give and take order. In other words, instead of all the Senate committee chairman and officials Democrats, as at present, they will be divided beteen Democrats and Republicans, with the chances in favor of the Populists being entirely left out in the cold.

Few Americans, no matter what may be their opinions of the Cuban revolution, will agree with Attorney-General Harmon's assertion that expressions of sympathy by citizens of this country for struggling Cubans are "discourteous in the highest degree to a friendly power and tend to embarass and obstruct the government in carrying out its determination faithfully to execute the laws and fulfill its treaty obligations." The Constitution of the United Statet guarantees the freedom of speech, and Mr. Harmon is probably the first member of a President's cabinet to officially declare its exercise to be discourteous to a foreign government or embarassing to our own. Mr. Harmon may speak for this Administration, which has not at any time during its existence reflected public sentiment upon any question of importance, but he certainly does not speak for the American people, who will continue to exercise their constitution-given rights by publicly expressing their opinions and sympathies, just as they have always done. If it be discourteous for Americans to express sympathy for the Cuban revolutions it was also discourtesy for the French to have expressed sympathy for the American revolutionists of '76. The very corner stone of this nation is freedom, and if the time ever comes when our people do not sympathize with, aye and express their sympathy, too, for those in other countries who are struggleing for freedom, our own freedom will be in great danger. What adds to the incongruity, not to say absurdity, of the Attorney General's position is the fact that Spain did not stop to consider whether it was discourteous to the United States or not when she recognized the belligerency of the late Confederate states very early in the late civil war.

Mr. Peffer, the bewhiskered gentleman who partly represents Kansas in the Senate, brings his opinions to Washington a little ahead of Congress, probably to escape the rush. Several years ago he was cocksure that the Populists would elect the next President, but since then he has been keeping tab on public sentiment, and now he gravely announces that he hasn't any doubt that the Republicans will elect the next President as well as a majority of the House, and that the Populists will not come into power before 1900, and maybe not until later. Now isn't that really kind of the old gentleman? He postpones the coming of the Populists into power solely to give the Republicans another four or eight year's control of the country, but warns them that their management of the government is going to result in the breaking up of the party. Seriously speaking Mr. Peffer knows that the Republicans are bound to win next year, unless there is a very radical shifting of opinion within the next twelve months; he also knows that the Populist movement is dead, speaking in a national sense. His prophecy of their getting control of the government is merely a bit of humor, for everybody except the Populists whom he probably sizes up to be gullible enough to believe anything.

Students as Conductors in Philadelphia.

The Electric Engineer says that "during the past summer between 30 and 40 students of Jefferson Medical College, the Philadelphia College of Dentistry, the University of Pennsylvania and other colleges in Philadelphia obtained employment as conductors on the cars of the People's Traction System of Philadelphia. All of the young men came from outside the city, and were working their way through college. The last of them handed in their resignation last week, which the company accepted with regret, for the young men have proved to be the best conductors in its employ. An official of the company said the students were thoroughly honest, intelligent and polite, and as their desire was to earn as much money during the summer as possible, they were always willing to work extra hours and take out special cars. They lived economically and have probably saved something like $130 each, which will go a good way toward paying their college expenses next winter. One of the students has almost concluded not to go back to college, he likes railroading so well, and is still in the employ of the company."

A Trial of Spraying Machines.

In the field trial of spraying machines under the direction of the Cornell station, two classes of horse-power machines were entered—gravity machines, or those that simply dripped out the water by its own weight, and those that carried a pump to force the water out. All the gravity machines failed to throw out the bordeaux mixture. They quickly clogged and became useless. While these machines will handle paris green in water fairly well, they are not serviceable with bordeaux mixture, for the lime will surely clog them unless some force is employed to push the mixture out. The machines with pump attachment did better. The most effective sprayer was a homemade affair thus described by Rural New Yorker:

Last among the mounted sprayers came a rude, wild woodsy affair which contrasted strongly with its painted and polished namesake. It consisted of the frame and wheels of an old grain drill, shortened to fit three feet potato rows. On it were nailed some rough boards. In these was placed a kerosene barrel with a force pump and hose. To the latter was attached with proper couplings a piece of gas pipe, resting on the rear of the machine, nine feet in length and fitted with four Vermorel nozzles. The thills were stout hickory poles, lashed on with wire. The operator went down the rows driving the one horse, pumping and occasionally stirring the mixture with a paddle. All the other machines had stopped for adjustment, or because they could not get on with the spraying. Why would not this rude affair? But on went the "one horse shay," where one part was as perfect as another, without a stop, save at the ends of the rows and covering 24 rows with the mixture.

The Knapsack sprayers, with pumps, did good work, and so did the powder guns. The success of this homemade sprayer ought to show farmers how a little display of mechanical skill may save money for them.

Points In Celery Culture.

It is well known that the celery plant delights in a rich and moist soil, and those who have the opportunity to use liquid manure in the cultivation of this plant have a great advantage over others. In addition to this, some cultivators who grow the celery for market are introducing water artificially, and find it to be a profitable practice. In this connection Meehan's Monthly cites a grower in Allegheny City, Pa., who has a supply pipe from one of the city water mains so arranged that at the end where the flow commences guano or some other artificial fertilizer can be placed in the water pipes. He can get double the crop from the same ground as by the ordinary methods, and stalks that bring a much higher price in market.

Borax as a Fruit Preservative.

Here is what Rural New Yorker says of it: A borax producer in California is said to be experimenting with this substance as a fruit preservative. The fresh fruit is to be packed in barrels with the powdered borax. A shipment of cherries packed in this way reached Chicago in "prime condition." This is far more honest than it is to buy 5 cents' worth of borax, mix it with a little salt, sugar, etc., name it "Preservaline," and sell it for 50 cents, but it will not prove profitable. Borax should not be used on fruit just before it is to be eaten. While it will undoubtedly keep the fruit in a fresh condition, it is injurious to health, and the health boards in large cities where fruit is sold will surely prohibit its use.

The Single taxers have passed by Middletown, taking their tent from New Castle to Dover. The TRANSCRIPT argued the matter over and the people here have no desire to know more of the single tax. Their passing us by is a compliment.

—Mrs. N. M. Browne, Mr. C. W. Weldin, Mrs Washington Hastings and Miss Sarah Weldin are in attendance upon the Annual Convention of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, at Columbus, Ohio.

—The housefly lingers and sticks closer than a brother. In fact he sticks better now than any time of the year. He has learned all about tangle-foot and he steers wide of it. He doesn't show lassitude and yet with Jack Frost on deck he can't feel exactly well.

—A mass meeting will be held in the Grand Opera House, of Wilmington, to-night, to express the sympathy of the people of this state with the Cuban revolutionists. The governor, and many prominent city, county and state officials are expected to be present.

—Never was rain more welcome than that of last Saturday and Sunday. It came as a benediction and was a gracious gift to the parched earth and the inhabitants thereof. Farmers have been busy enough this week finishing seeding wheat that had been delayed until the rain made it possible.

—The popular little drama, "Ben Bolt," will be rendered by local talent in the Opera House on Thanksgiving night, at the annual entertainment to be given by the Ladies' Mite Society of the M.E.Church. The play is very taking and the cast includes a number of Middletown's most popular amateur performers.

—Smith Bros. who succeded Geo. S. Richards in the Bakery business a few months ago, have sold out their interests here to Paul Webber and have removed to to Chester, Pa. Mr. Webber who is well known here, took charge of the business on Monday. He is an experienced baker and will devote himself to the tastes of his patrons.

—The Delaware Railroad Company has paid off one of the largest mortgages on record at the court house. It was for $650,000. The mortgagee was the Fidelity Insurance, Trust and Safe Deposit Company. The company has paid $73,000 on the face of the mortgage and the Fidelity takes $576,500 in stock in lieu of the remainder.

—Joseph L. Cahall, Esqr., of Georgetown, who was elected two weeks since Grand Master of M. W, Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Delaware, has announced his standing committees. Union Lodge of Middletown is represented in the appointments by Alfred G. Cox, chairman of Committee on Work, and W. W. Black, Jr., on Committee on Past Grand Master's Jewels.

—Isaac Wilson has the contract to paint the Port Penn Presbyterian Church.

—I. T. Parker, State Councillor, will pay an official visit to Buck Council, Jr. O. U. A, M. at Summit Bridge, on October 30th.

—The order has been given for the new carpet for the M. E. Church and the work of cleaning, decorating etc., will be pushed rapidly forward and all finished early in November.

—It is getting to be quite the thing graduate and get a position through the recommendation of that fine school. Goldey's Wilmington, (Del.,) Commercial and Short hand College. Get a catalogue.

—Mr. Theodore Armstrong, who was hit by a brick in a crowd on Saturday night last, was out attending to his business the next day, though sensational newspaper reporters had him at that time in a dying condition.

—Emily Scout, an old colored woman who lived with her daughter, Rachel Saulsbury, in one of Mr. Willits' tenement houses near town, was found dead in her bed yesterday morning. She had been ailing for several days.

—Mr. E. S. Jones has a bran new barber shop at his old stand, a little paint, fresh paper and new linoleum did it. With three of the latest improved chairs he thinks his shop will compare favorably with the best in the State south of Wilmington.

—"Have you observed," said the merchant to a customer, "the handsome advertisement I have on a fence between Stroudsburg and Water Gap?" "No," replied the customer, "but if you send the fence around to my house I will try to read the advertisement. I read the papers and I haven't time to go around reading billboards." And the merchant scratched his head.—Straudsburg Times.

—According to an act of the last legislature the gunning season throughout the state this year will not open until December 1st, and will continue only thirty days. Notices to this effect have been put up by the Game Association, and detectives instructed to enfore the law. The blizzard of last winter, was so disastrous to rabbits and birds, that for the protection of the game in the state this measure was adopted.

—Some modern traducer of the fair sex has said that the reason Eve yielded to the serpent on that memorable day when fashions were introduced, was because he told her apples were good for the complexion. Whether that be true or not, it is true that a ripe, raw apple stimulates the liver; and the more fruit we have in our dietary the clearer our skin and the clearer our brains will be. Apple eating is therefore a popular and wholesome diversion among brainy and beautiful people.

—Mr. Paul Weber, who has had twenty years experience in the bakery business has bought out the Smith Brothers who recently came here from Newark. He is occupying the old Richards bakery on East Main street, where he worked two years with Mr. Richards. If the people of Middletown enjoy the good things from Mr. Weber's bakery as much as the TRANSCRIPT force did the plate of hot doughnuts which came with his compliments on Thursday, then he will be a very busy man.

The Langdon Dramatic Company, which has been at the Opera House all this week has played to the entire satisfaction of theatre goers. Part of the time their houses have been good and at other times their efforts merited a larger audience, the popularity of the play having something to do with the attendance. There has been a nightly change of bill. At the matinee this afternoon the company presents "A Woman's Revenge or Shadows of a Great City," and to-night "Old Rip Van Winkle" will be played. They go to Smyrna from here.

—Several important events are expected to transpire the first week in November. Now don't get nervous, the TRANSCRIPT never anticipates announcements. The election comes off the first week in November and it is an important event, but it is not the event in mind. And by the way this event does not transpire the first week in November, though others just as important to some people may, yet it is so near to it that a day's or two days' difference does not matter. The event in mind is billed for Friday, November 8th, and to it are invited all the citizens of Middletown. No one can be slighted who will invest 25 or 35 cents, and those who are not citizens of Middletown but will invest their money will be just as welcome. The place is the Middletown Opera House, and the entertainment is to be an evening with Prof. and Mrs. DeKeller Stamey whose recommendations as entertainers are A No. 1. Make up your mind to attend.

—What is sweeter to the taste, more inviting to the eye, and more wholesome to the inner man than fine grapes? Nothing. Who grows finer ones than Middletown's obliging Postmaster? No one. Who has sampled those delicious grapes, sampled them for a whole day of twenty-four hours and then had some left to begin sampling the next day? The writer. To what can the sampling of such grapes be likened? To nothing short of the old-time combination of a corn husking or a wood chopping and a quilting bee, the memory of which will brighten the eye to this day of the good old grandmother and lessen the rheumatism of the occupant of the old arm chair in the corner as they recall those happy days and their innocent sports. How can samples be procured? That is a leading question and should be paid for at regular advertising rates: Receive an invitation to dine with your pastor and his good lady, sample the grapes there and pay them an honest compliment as being "fine city" grapes, repeat your mistake in the presence of the lady who presides at the Postmaster's table, and tell how perfectly natural it was to think such grapes are not grown here, and——well, return your thanks and the dish, do not forget the dish as there is always afuture, another crop of grapes. See!

DIED.

Jesse Sharp died suddenly on Friday of last week of paralysis of the brain at his home near Wilmington, aged fifty-six years. A son and daughter survive him. The funeral was held on Tuesday, interment being made in Bethel Cemetery.

Isaac T. Lapham, an old resident and prominent farmer of near Smyrna, died on Friday night of last week, aged 77 years.

Eternity has no gray hairs.

Beautiful silks for waists at Mrs. Barnett's. It will pay you to see them before you purchase.

Speak well even to bad men.

Mrs. M. C. Barnett has more samples of dress goods from the leading dry goods houses in Philadelphia. New and cheap too! Select your dress and she'll buy it for you without extra cost.

Faults are thick where love is thin.

It is about time to make the Thanksgiving fruit-cake. Mr. Connellee has all the ingredients; currants, raisins, citron, etc.—a fresh stock just in.

A bad day never hath a good night.

Mrs. V. L. Massey is laying in a stock of beautiful goods in cut glass and silver that cannot fail to please her customers. Her prices are right, too.

By ignorance we mistake and by mistake we learn.

Something new in canned goods. Never put on the market before. French Kidney Bean. Only 10 cents a can. Mr. Connellee has them and wants you to try a can and prove their excellence.

Discontents arise from our desires ottener than from our wants.

It begins to look like the holidays at Mrs. Massey's. Among her new goods are some rare ornaments in Austrian ware, quite new. Also some very handsome clocks in various sizes.

We never know how cold the wind blows until our own window panes are out.

Mrs. A. M. McKee's milliners are very busy these days, but not too busy to show you the prettiest hats in town. Her fall and winter stock is now completed.

Getting money is not all a man's business to cultivate kindness is a valuable part of the business of life.

The Misses Echenhofer have the most fetching way of making the most hats and bonnets. And they fetch the buyers too!

Kind words can never die, but some times they come home after many days so changed as to be unrecognizable.

—Everybody was pleased with the beautiful display of millinery and the artistic arrangement of the store at Mrs. Barnett's autumn opening last Saturday. Her hats are having a ready sale, and new ones are being added to her stock, daily. Her milliner has the new ideas and weaves the latest fancies into her beautiful pattern hats. Dont fail to see them.

Who Would'nt Be?

"Mr. William L. Davidson, of Manningtown, was completely taken by surprise on Wednesday night last by a number of his friends calling upon him just as he was in the act of retiring. The evening was very pleasantly spent."—Salem, N. J. Standard.

Of course he was, and especially since a majority of the the thirty-five society people who called were ladies.

Will Visit Middletown.

The attention of the citizens of Middletown and vicinity is called to the advertisement in another column of J. Frank Brinkerhoff, specialist on the eye, of Philadelphia. Mr. Brinkerhoff is well known here and all who are suffering with their eyes should call to see him.

Slander Cases Ended.

The slander cases of Samuel G. Fisher vs. Charles Barker and others, were called in the Sussex County Court, at Georgetown on Tuesday. The attorney for the defendents stated that a satisfactory settlement of the matter had been made, the defendents disclaiming any libelous intentions in anything that had been written, published or uttered against Samuel G. Fisher, the plaintiff, who said the disclaimer, which was read in open court, was satisfactory, and thus ended a somewhat famous case.

Sudler—Culbreth.

The marriage of Miss Susan Culbreth, of Smyrna, to Mr. C. H. Sudler of Chicago, was celebrated at the residence of the bride's mother, in Smyrna, on Wednesday, with a very fashionable and elaborate wedding. The bride wore a Paris gown of white satin, trimmed with chiffon, and carried a bouquet of Bride roses and lilies of the valley. She was given away by her uncle, Mr. Richard Smith Culbreth, of Baltimore. The best man was Ralph Culbreth Hoffecker. The maid of honor, Miss M. Virginia Sudler, wore a gown of white organdie over pink taffeta, and carried La France roses. A reception followed the marriage, which was attended by a large company of friends and relatives.

Miss Clara Green of Middletown, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Frank B. Watkins.

Mrs. William S. VanDyke is entertaining Mrs. Laura Dewitt and daughter, Miss Lydia, of Philadelphia.

Mr, William VanDyke is greatly improving the appearance of his residence on High street by the addition of a new roof.

Mr. George C. Gibson, who is a student at the Friend School in Wilmington, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Gibson.

Chestnuts are now ripe and a number of parties have gone to the woods searching for them within the past week but judging from the quantities brought home they cannot be very plentiful as yet.

On Monday evening the home of Mr. D. W. Corbit was the scene of a very enjoyable family reunion, the occasion being a surprise party in honor of the Silver Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Corbit. Relatives from a distance were present and a number of beautiful presents were received.

At about half past eleven o' clock Saturday evening the home of Mrs. Mary Hamilton was entered by some unknown man but the return of a member of the family who had been spending the evening out frightened off the would-be burglar before he had succeeded in obtaining anything.

On Saturday evening Mrs. W. R. Davis entertained a number of young folks in honor of her cousin, Miss Etta McVey, who returned to her Wilmington home on Monday. Various games were indulged in until a late hour when the guests returned to their various homes well pleased with their evening's fun.

TOWNSEND TOPICS.

The tomato cannery closed on Saturday.

Mrs. Buxson, of Odessa, is the guest of Mrs. I. Prithchard.

Mrs. Mollie Jacobs, of Millington, is the guest of her parents.

Evangelist William Galloway spent Sunday with us and took charge of both the morning and evening service.

Mr. A. J. Lynam has returned from attending the Supreme Castle of the K. G. E. which was held in Washington.

Mrs. Sarah J. Mannering and her daughter, Mrs. Eldridge, of Wilmington, spent Thursday with Mrs. T. A. Enos.

Mr. Cole, who lived near Warwick, moved into town this week. He occupies the house vacated by Mrs. Maggie Roe.

The Junior League is preparing for a public meeting to be held in the hall in the near future. A small admission fee will be charged.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hutchison celebrated the second anniversary of their marriage Oct. 11th in an original way. The friends who were invited to commemorate the day were not of their own age but selected five elderly ladies all of whom have passed the sixtieth mile stone of life. They were Mrs. Catharine Hutchison, Mrs. Sarah VanDyke, Mrs. Mary Hutchison, Mrs. Margaret Welch and Mrs. Joanna Lattomus. A year ago this party numbered seven but today Mrs. David Wells is numbered with the great majority whose life work is over. Mrs. James Foxwell has moved to Philadelphia. It was a pleasant anniversary.

CHURCH NOTES.

Asbury M. E. Church, of Wilmington, celebrated its 106th anniversary on Wednesday.

In Bethesda M. E. Church the pastor Rev. I. L. Wood will preach to-morrow morning on The "Mission of Affliction," and in the evening his suoject will be "The Best Friend."

Last Sunday was not propitions for large congregations, and very few of the inhabitants were brave enough to face the storm after having prayed and longed for its coming.

Rev. T. E. Terry, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church, in Wilmington, who has been at Oxford, Md., for the past two months, resting and recuperating has so far recovered his usual health as to resume his ministerial duties this week.

Rev. Charles Steele Davidson, formerly of the Diocese of New York, has been installed rector of the Episcopal Church at Chesapeake City. He will hold service at St Augustine, to-morrow at 2.30. P. M. besides the regular morning and evening services at Chesapeake.

Rev. F. H. Moore attended the annual session of the Presbyterian Synod, of Baltimore, which convened at the First Church in that city, this week. This Synod embraces all the Presbyterian Churches in Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia. and was attended by over 300 delegates.

The extra meeting closed at the Armory Church, Dover, with 55 conversions, 41 of whom have united with Armory Church, with seven others received by letter. The congregation is unanimous for the pastor's Rev. Charles I. Stengle, return next year. The membership has been increased by 60 this conference year.

"Russia and Religious Liberty" will be the subject of Rev. F. H. Moore's sermon Sunday evening, October 20th. This sermon will be the last in the series on "Lessons from Travel" and in this discourse Mr. Moore will give an account of the persecutions of the stundists and of the Jews. All are cordiliay invited to attend.

Headaches.

Many thousands of people suffer from chronic headaches, finding no relief in medicine or other remedies. In nine cases out of ten the malady is caused by eye strains which can be entirely relieved by properly adjusted glasses.

The difficulty may be so slight that the sufferer's vision is imprecceptibly impaired, and yet, with the application of the proper lenses to the eyes the headache disappears. Headaches are also caused by ill-adjusted glasses. The wearer of the glasses may see better, it is true, but unless the lenses are ground so as to perfectly correct every defect, they may increase the trouble instead of relieving it. J. F. Brinkerhoff the well-known eye specialist will again be in Middletown at Mrs. Massey's jewelry store on Tuesday November 12th.

If you have headaches or if your eyes are causing you any trouble you should see him at once.

Nowland—Gemmi Nuptials.

Robert T. Nowland, of Philadelphia, son of Dr. E. T. Nowland of this town, was married on Wednesday afternoon to Mrs. Mary Victoria Gemmi, of Mt. Airy. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride, by Rev. S. C. Hill, rector of Grace P. E. Church of Mt. Airy. Mr. Horace M. Walker, of New York, was best man.

GOOD EATING AND GOOD OFFICES.

If there is a man in the State of Delaware who does not know that the Pennsylvania railroad rules, and to all intents and purposes, owns both of the leading parties in Delaware, let him watch Massey and Wolcott make the appointment of Chancellor. Here is a so-called Republican leader, who is the assistant solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a great Democratic leader who contemplates becoming the same corporation's attorney, pulling together and planning and scheming to have Governor Watson appoint a Chancellor that they select who can be depended upon to do his duty towards their masters. This is the way the Pennsylvania Railroad people do things. When a man enters its employ he sells himself, body and soul, and he is bound to do their bidding. We do not believe Governor Watson will appoint any man who is favored by Wolcott, for this means Massey's choice and Massey's man means the Pennsylvania Railroad. Governor Watson is too independent a Chief Magistrate to do any man's bidding and we believe he is independent enough to refuse to do the bidding —to become the tool,—of the Pennsylvania Railroad. John R. Nicholson is eminently qualified for the position, in all that makes a man qualified, and the fact of his being opposed by Wolcott and Massey should cause the Governor to settle on him as his selection for Chancellor. Of course the Governor cannot do anything open until Wolcott resigns, but he can look the matter over and give the subject due consideration and deliberation and announce his selection the moment Wolcott's resignation is placed in his hands. John R. Nicholson ought to be Chancellor when thevacancy occurs and we believe Governor Watson will also take this view of the matter. —Milford Chronicle.

Gov. W. T. Watson of Delaware was the guest of George V. Massey, the well-known Delaware Republican leader, at the Union League yesterday, where Mr. Massey gave a little dinner party in the colonial room to the Governor. The others in the party were the Governor's mother and wife and Mrs. Massey.—Philadelphia Record Oct. 11th.

A DUCK FARM.

Mr. O. J. Schneck, of Peninsula Hotel, spent a day recently viewing a Pennsylvania duck farm, located near Allentown. Mr. Schneck gives a very interesting description of the industry and the methods by which it is made a financial success. There are over ten thousand birds on the premises where Mr. Schneck viewed them. The ducks are thoroughbred Pekins hatched in incubators, on the spot, and their plumage made an aspect of snowy whiteness of acres of ground. To feed these birds a ton and a half of mash is daily consumed. The birds are marketed at the age of six months and upward in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and elsewhere at twenty cents per pound.

Mr. Schneck visited the farm having down in his mind the idea of starting a similar industry at Salisbury. A shallow running stream with clear gravelly bottom and a hard gravelly soil are the first essentials to the best success of such an enterprise. These Mr. Schneck has not been able to find here hence he hesitates.—Salisbury Advertiser.

The Irish potato crop of Delaware is very short this year. A larger acreage than ever was planted, but the prolonged drouth and scorching suns withered the vines, which died weeks ago. One farmer near Milford planted about 100 bushels of seed on good soil that was heavily manured. He thinks he will not harvest more than he planted. Potatoes are selling in the Milford market at 40 cents per bushel. In several States of the Union the current price ranges from 20 to 25 cents per bushel. Great Britian and Canada have large crops.—News and Advertiser.

He who houses his farm implements in the corners of fences, whose fowls roost in the trees during the winter, whose manure pile leaches into a roadside ditch and who wipes his nose on his coatsleeve,, makes piteous complaint "that farming don't pay."

In 100 pounds of dressed pork there are usually 14 pounds ham, 16 pounds shoulders, 40 pounds sides, 16 pounds lard and 14 pounds waste. The hog products are now lower than they have been since the war.

No feed produces finer flavored milk, butter, cheese or hams than parsnips, and no roots are better relished by hogs or bovines; 700 bushels may be grown per acre.

Farm tools are seldom worn out, but more often become brittle by exposure, and thus break or become rickety. Plows, cultivators, horse-rakes, etc., are simply varnished when sold, and a few months of use removes this. They should then receive a good coat of paint. The farm wagons also need repairing at early times, When kept well painted the wheels will not shrink so much, thus requiring less tire setting. Every farmer should have a pot of paint and a brush. They will save ten times their cost each year if put to good use—Correspondence Rural Home.

If a fruit jar cover will not readily come off, invert the jar and put the the top in hot water for a minute or two, and you will be surprised to find how easily the cover yields to a very slight effort.

A simple remedy for neuralgia is to apply grated horseradish, prepared the same as for table, to the temple, when the face or head is affected, or to the wrist when the pain is in the arm or shoulder.

Every article of food should be kept covered until it appears on the table. Milk and butter should be kept in air-tight vessels. They take up every odor flying in the air and are positively harmful to the stomach after standing uncovered for an hour or two. Not only odors, but the animalcule that fill the air are attracted to butter and milk. Uncovered jelly is a menace to family health, yet in two-thirds of the pantries in will be found half used dishes of jelly standing uncovered.

DON'T SCRIMP !

A horny-handed workingman in Meriden, whose wages have never been over $2 a day, has saved $9,000 from them, which he keeps at interest in the savings bank. He must surely have lived very closely: he must have been mean toward his four children, three girls and one boy; he must have cut down his family supplies to a low notch during the forty years in which he has been laying up his riches. It is time for us to that we cannot hold him up as an example to be followed by all other workingmen. It would not be well for them to live as he must have lived all his life, never enjoying a half pint of peanuts or a saucer of ice cream, never giving any of his children a stick of candy or a doll, hardly ever buying a new dress for his wife or a suit of clothes for himself, or a copy of a Meriden newspaper. The word in that household from morning till night, at breakfast, dinner, and supper, must have been scrimp. He is surely a stingy man, something like a skinflint; or, how could he have saved so much out of his small wages? We can't say that we admire his style.

It is good for a man to live pretty well, if he can afford it, and to get the best out of his money as he goes along, always, of course, avoiding anything like wastefulness, always practising economy. It is good for him to put some money in the bank if he can; but not much more than he can spare. It is right for one to feather his nest, but wrong to stuff it so full of feathers that its occupant cannot breathe freely. Certainly, oh, certainly, you should lay up something against a rainy day; but still you need not squeeze all the juice out of life, like the stingy $2-a-day man of Meriden.—N. Y. Sun.

When a person is losing flesh and wasting away there is cause for alarm. Nothing so worries a physician. Consumptives would never die if they could regain their usual weight. In fact there would be no consumption if there was no wasting of the system. The cause of this loss of flesh is a failure to properly digest the food eaten. Nine-tenths of all our diseases date back to some derangement of the stomach.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial will stop this wasting of the body. It acts by causing the food we eat to be digested so as to do good, for undigested food does more harm than good. The Cordial contains food already digested and a digester of foods as well.

Every mother hates to make her children take Castor Oil. Laxol is sweet Castor Oil.

Our Woman's .....Column

HE woman physician has a grievance which is not at all of the order one would popularly suppose it to be. She does not bemoan the fact that she is called up late at night to attend a case or is she hysterical over the cockroaches that greet her on the creaking stairways of tenements in the slums. She has chosen her profession knowing all the hardships it entails and she does not care how great these hardships are if she can only earn a fair living and in time win name and fame for herself.

The trouble comes in from an entirely different source. To be frank and get down to facts, she is "worked" by all her acquaintances for free advice and the diplomacy they employ leaves no room for refusal on her part. For instance, on a summer evening when friends gather on the front porch the conversation is skilfully brought around to the subject of "mother's cold" or "Bobby's hives" and in the most innocent manner the speaker turns her eyes upon the struggling young physician and says: "Doctor, what do you think would be good for them?"

"Now, if "doctor" were a man she would say: "Bring mother and Bobby to my office during office hours and I will prescribe for them," but the unhappy girl not wishing to appear disagreeable feels that she must impart for nothing the knowledge that it has taken years of study and expense to acquire. "Why, do you know," said a woman physician the other day, "I counted up one day in dollars the amount of gratuitous advice that had been worked out of me the evening before and I discovered that a very tidy little sum would have been mine if my friends had only respected my sign as they do those of men in the same profession. I know I am not the only sufferer in this line and I think it is high time a definite protest was made against a species of genteel highway robbery that takes the very bread out of the months of struggling women who have scarted in the practice of medicine with a view of deriving therefrom some pecuniary benefit."

A SMALL MEANESS.

Many women who would scorn a dishonest or even a mean action have a certain habit which they consider merely thrifty and which borders very closely nevertheless on real greed. This is the handling over and sorting vegetables or fruit before purchasing. Every woman has a perfect right to refuse to buy what she does not think after proper investigation is worth the price asked for it. But no woman has any right whatever to pick out the best for herself, thus leaving all the poor portions, either for less fortune buyers or on the seller's hands. Some go as far as to open ears of corn to examine the kernels. It is quite possible that the next comer may not care for what shows so plainly that it has been condemned, even though matters have not gone so far as with a certain prominent clergyman's wife who positively bites into the article handed to her to see if she likes the flavor. Such people do not mean to be grasping nor unfair, but they must be very hard for the poor huckster to endure in patient silence.

HER FIRST ATTEMPT.

"And what a surprise it will be to dear George !" she was saying to herself. "It fits lovely, and I mean to make all my things after this and save all my dressmaker's bills. It isn't every man has such a wife. I'll wear it to the progressive euchre club to-night; I know not another single woman will have a new thing on. I'll just sew in this last sleeve, and then I'll have it on when George comes home, and—"

There was a shriek, and the fall of 127 pounds among the sofa cushions. She had made both sleeves for the same arm.

***

HER GREAT TROUBLE.

"What a love of a dog!" exclaimed a caller at a Jefferson avenue mansion as a bundle of hair and ribbons trotted into the room.

"Yes, but he's a dreadful care," sighed the mistress of the household, sadly.

"What do you mean?" asked the visitor in surprise.

"Why, you know I bought Bijou in Paris last Summer and he doesn't understand a word of English, so I had a French maid for him all Winter, but last June she insisted on marrying some horried creature, and now we have a French Canadian girl, and she worries me dread ully."

"Does she abuse him?" asked the visitor, indignantly.

"Oh, dear, no; she's as kind as can be, but these Canadians speak such poor French—suppose she should ruin Bijou's accent. It makes me sick to think of it."

The Wisdom of the Past.

"—'Twas said by ancient sages
That love of life increased with years
So much, that in our latter stages,
When pains grow sharp and sickness rages
The greatest love of life appears."

But to retain the vigor of youth, the enjoyment of life, the blessings of a healthy appetite, and a good digestion, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and live to a hale and hearty old age. For dyspepsia, indigestion, "liver complaint" and kindred ailments, the "Discovery" is a most positive remedy. By druggists.

Piles.

Piles is so common that every other person you meet is troubled with it more or less. It seems to be a little thing and usually gets little attention. It may not be serious at first, but it makes a man sick—makes him nervous, cross, irritable—unfit for business. It robs him of sleep, takes his appetite—cuts down his flesh—and yet he is careless about it.

VIRGINIA GREY

Winter —OR— Turf Oats

These Oats are said to be as hardy as wheat, and will stand as much cold when well established. Sown during August and September they will make a good growth before winter sets in and will furnish excellent grazing, during late fall, early spring and open spells in winter, without injury to the grain crop afterwards. Will yield on good ground 70 to 100 bushels per acre oats weighing 35 to 40 pounds per bushel.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY

—FOR THE—

Cotton States and International Exposition,

ATLANTA, GA.

The Southern Railway operates nearly five thousand miles of road in eight of the Southern States and its lines enter Atlanta, Ga., from five different points of the compass. Washington, D. C., is the Northern or Eastern terminus of one of its lines which is operated in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad, "the standard railroad of America." between New York through Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., Lynchburg and Danville, Va., Greensboro and Charlotte, N. C., Spartanburg and Greenville, S. C., Atlanta, Ga., Montgomery and Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans with connections at Salisbury for Asheville, Hot Springs, Knoxville and Chatanooga, at Charlotte for Columbia, Augusta, Savannah and Jacksonville, and at Atlanta for Birmingham, Memphis, Macon and Southern Georgia. Solid vestibuled limited trains with through day coaches, Pullman Drawing-room Sleepers and Dining-cars. Time between Washington and Atlanta, eighteen hours, without change of cars of any class.

The Southern Railway is the only line which enters and lands passengers in the Exposition grounds, and no effort or expense has been spared by the management in the improvement of its roadbed, increasing the number of its coaches and inaugurating its own dining car service preparatory to handling expeditiously and comfortably the heavy travel to and from Atlanta during the Cotton States and International Exposition, which opens September 18 and closes December 31, 1895.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, from September 17 to December 24, inclusive, excursion tickets will be sold from Washington, D. C., to Atlanta, Ga., at $14 00, good for return 10 days from date of sale.

Excursion tickets will be sold every day from September 16 until December 15, inclusive, from Washington at $19.25, good for return 20 days from date of sale, and excursion tickets for the entire Exposition season with final limit of January 7, 1896, will be sold from September 16 until December 15, inclusive, at $26.25.

Map folders furnished and Pullman Sleeping car reservations made upon application.
